Eritreans evacuate strategic stronghold in face of bombing raids by Ethiopians

ROME, May 29 (R). — Eritrean rebels said today they had evacuated one of their most important strongholds because of heavy Ethiopian air raids which had killed at least 100 people. A spokesman for the Eritrean Liberation Front (ELF) Revolutionary Council (ELF-RC), one of two main insurgent groups fighting Ethiopia for the independence of the former Italian colony, said it had pulled out of Mandeferra (also known as Adi Ugr). "The Ethiopian air force has been bombing it every day and the city is semi-destroyed," Joannes Zesemariam Azazi told Reuters. "It has been evacuated."

Ababa, the Ethiopian capital, and Asmara, the provincial Eritrean capital, which has been besieged by the rebels for months. If Ethiopia tried a major offensive from the neighbouring province of Tigre it might advance down this highway in hopes of linking up with the Asmara garrison. In a separate development, the rebels said they had turned back an Ethiopian advance north-west of Asmara and forced the government troops to retreat behind their previous positions. A spokesman for the Eritrean Peoples Liberation Front (EPLF) said the Ethiopian forces had advanced to the big village of Hemberti, about 30 kms. west of Asmara, and to two other villages. "But the EPLF launched an offensive against them and all Ethiopian forces have been pushed back from these places," spokesman Andemicael Cahai, a member of the leftist EPLF's Central Committee, told Reuters. "Fighting is now going on at Weidebe, only six kms. north-west of Asmara," he added.

ERITREANS START JOINT OPERATION

CHARTOUM, May 29 (R). — Two major Eritrean Liberation Front groups said today they had begun a combined operation earlier this month to capture the town of Barentu from Ethiopian forces. Barentu is one of only four towns believed to be in Ethiopian hands after the 17-year guerrilla war waged by secessionist rebels in the country's northern province. The two independence movements — the Eritrean Liberation Front (ELF) and the Eritrean Peoples Liberation Front (EPLF) — signed an accord here in March to cooperate more closely, and they said today the Barentu operation was the first test of how well their unity was working.

China raps American, Russian intentions

UNITED NATIONS, May 29 (R). — Accusing the United States and the Soviet Union of duplicity in their disarmament proposals, China predicted today that eventually one of the super-powers would go to war against the other. In a fierce attack on both Washington and Moscow at the U.N. special session on disarmament, Chinese Foreign Minister Huang Hua called the Russians the more aggressive and "the most dangerous source of a new world war." The Soviet Union was sure to be the "chief instigator" of another global conflict, he told delegates from 149 member nations — including Soviet Ambassador Oleg Troyanovsky. Mr. Huang Hua had been expected to answer Peking's criticisms of Moscow and Washington, but the fury of his assault surprised many delegates. "One super-power is bent on expansion," he said. "The other has its vested interests to protect. As the struggle intensifies, they are bound to fight it out some day." The tense confrontation in Europe, the turmoil in the Middle East, and the gathering storm in Africa are all visible indications of the growth of factors for war," the Chinese foreign minister declared. He said the Russians were increasing their military threat to Western Europe trying to expand their influence in the Middle East and carrying out a series of military adventures in Africa.

U.N. troops caught in crossfire in a generally quiet S. Lebanon

BEIRUT, May 29 (R). — United Nations peacekeeping troops in south Lebanon are being caught almost daily in crossfire between rival forces using heavy weapons, a U.N. spokesman said here today. Spokesman Keith Beavan said armed guerrillas had evacuated most of the region under U.N. control but others were still fighting from a hilltop strongpoint just outside this area. He said troops attached to the U.N. force (UNIFIL), particularly from a Nepalese battalion, were being caught in the middle of regular artillery and heavy machinegun fire exchanged between the Chateau de Beaufort and villages in the eastern sector of the south. The chateau is an old crusader fortress held by Palestinian guerrillas and Lebanese fighters on the northern bank of the Litani River, which marks the limit of UNIFIL deployment. The villages across the river are occupied by Lebanese rightists as well as Israeli troops who invaded the south in March. In another development, Lebanese President Elias Sarkis and Prime Minister Selim Al Hoss will pay an official visit to Syria on Wednesday, it was announced today. Local residents today said three people were killed and five were wounded in the market town of Nabatiyah, which lies north of the Litani near the fortress, during a 30-minute artillery exchange last night. Mr. Beavan said no U.N. soldiers had been hit but UNIFIL had lodged strong protests about the continuing clashes. He said that apart from the fighting across the river, the situation throughout the area under U.N. control was generally quiet and UNIFIL troops had not fired a shot for three weeks. Attempts by armed men to infiltrate behind the U.N. lines still posed a problem, but about 65 of them had left the south in the past two weeks, most of them on their own initiative. The pull-out followed pledges by the Palestine Liberation Organisation (PLO) to facilitate UNIFIL's task of supervising a final Israeli withdrawal, scheduled for June 13. Mr. Beavan said only about 20 armed men were believed to be still behind the U.N. lines. They were in two positions which had been surrounded by the peacekeeping troops and negotiations were taking place to secure their withdrawal. He said they were Palestinians, Lebanese and another nationality who claimed to be outside PLO control. He declined to elaborate, but informed sources in Beirut said the remaining guerrillas were members of the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine and Lebanese leftists, as well as a few Iraqi volunteers. Asked about the presence of Israeli-backed rightist militias in the south, Mr. Beavan said UNIFIL would attempt to remove any armed men who had not been clearly designated by the Lebanese government as part of its authority.

French, Belgians plan Shaba airlift

KINSHASA, May 29 (R). — France and Belgium are laying plans to airlift women and children from Zaïre's southern province of Shaba to head off mass panic among whites there following the Kolwezi massacres, diplomatic sources said today. Two French military aircraft and an unspecified number of Belgian planes are on standby to pluck the 2,000 mothers and offspring from mining towns in the province, the sources said. French officials said today the death toll from the key mining town of Kolwezi now stood at 138. French Legionnaires put down the uprising in Kolwezi ten days ago, claiming to kill 150-300 of the anti-government rebels in the process. Hundreds of Zaïrean soldiers and civilians also died, according to the Red Cross. French officials said a token force of 150 Legionnaires, left in Kolwezi when the main French force pulled out two days ago, was today withdrawing to the Shaba provincial capital of Lubumbashi, 320 kms. south-east of Kolwezi to leave the war-ravaged town in the hands of about 1,000 Zaïrean soldiers. Three 120-mm companies of Belgian paratroops meanwhile fanned out to Shaba mining towns on "Show-the-flag" missions to raise white confidence. But about 200 European women and children have already left Shaba, after mothers withdrew their children from school and brought forward annual holidays in Europe, diplomatic sources said. "I know this country well and I know the whites," a Belgian businessman who has lived in Zaïre for 20 years said. "When the panic grips them it grows in their stomach and they cannot think rationally." Diplomatic sources said the French and Belgians had put aircraft at the disposal of the Europeans to prevent mass panic at the idea of being unable to leave Shaba if unrest spread. But the operation was not a formal evacuation so far, a Belgian spokesman here said. Diplomatic sources said that while women and children would be leaving, their menfolk would be staying on as part of an agreement with President Mobutu Sese Seko. The Zaïre leader arrived in Morocco today from his visit to Paris as part of a desperate quest for foreign help to crush the rebels and attract whites to return to Kolwezi and help restart the mines there. Belgian and French officers have forecast that the rebels will seek to re-infiltrate Kolwezi now that the legionnaires have left.

Khaled starts French visit

PARIS, May 29 (R). — King Khaled of Saudi Arabia began a two-day official visit to France today which promised to be dominated by the two countries' concern about recent threats to the security of moderate governments in Africa and the growth of Soviet influence on the continent. Other topics included the Middle East situation and prospects for increased economic and military cooperation between France and Saudi Arabia. President Valéry Giscard d'Estaing greeted the Saudi monarch, who was accompanied by key ministers of his government, including Defence Minister, Prince Sultan bin Abdulaziz and Foreign Minister Prince Saud Al Faisal.

Israel urges U.S. to abandon plan for NATO resolution calling for total withdrawal OCCUPIED JERUSALEM, May 29 (R). — Israel is urging the United States to abandon a reported plan for a NATO resolution which would request full Israeli withdrawal from occupied Arab lands, officials in Jerusalem said today.

A Foreign Ministry spokesman said that if such an American-sponsored resolution were adopted at this week's NATO summit in Washington, it would be "unfair and one-sided" as well as badly timed during the very midst of negotiations to promote peace. The government has sent an urgent message to Israeli Ambassador in Washington Simcha Diniz, telling him to seek U.S. withdrawal of the proposed resolution. Expressing annoyance at the reported U.S. plan, Israeli officials called it a further sign of American pressure on this country to change its policies. The officials said Israel learned only yesterday — and from European sources — that the U.S. would submit the resolution to the two-day summit, which begins tomorrow. Israeli Radio reported yesterday that the resolution would also stress the necessity for solving the Palestinian problem and recognising the legitimate rights of the Palestinian people in the determination of their future. The Israeli officials said that while the resolution expressed known U.S. positions, "scintily set out with Egypt, a summit acceptance of it would mark the first time that NATO had adopted a firm stand on the Middle East dispute. Israel was particularly annoyed that Washington did not inform it of plans for the NATO resolution. Israeli officials said Israel had not expected any new U.S. initiatives until after this country had reacted to two key questions put by President Carter to Premier Menachem Begin. The first concerned Israel's view of who should exercise ultimate sovereignty over the West Bank and Gaza after a five-year interim period. The second issue involved the system to be used in giving the Palestinians there a share in deciding their future. The Israeli cabinet, which was to have discussed the questions yesterday, had to postpone the debate because Mr. Begin was ill. Prime Minister Begin, who has been confined to his bed for several days with a fever, today was permitted by his doctors to attend tonight's swearing-in ceremony of Israel's new president Yitzhak Navon. Mr. Begin's spokesman said the 64-year-old premier's health had much improved and his temperature had dropped sharply since yesterday. He said Mr. Begin's doctors still did not know what had caused the sudden illness although they believed it had nothing to do with the heart trouble he suffered last year.

Yadin backs West Bank proposal as practical

BRUSSELS, May 29 (R). — Israel's Deputy Prime Minister, Yigael Yadin said today his country's proposal for provisional internal autonomy on the West Bank was the only practical starting point for negotiations with Egypt. He told a news conference he was optimistic for a peace settlement in the Middle East which included a five-year provisional solution for the West Bank. "It is this plan which is going to be the basis of the negotiations," he said. "It is the only practical starting point and that is why I am optimistic." He added contact with Egypt was continuing through the Americans and bilateral talks on peace would resume soon.

Mr. Yadin, who is head of the second largest party in Israel's coalition government, the Democratic Movement for Change, said Israeli settlements on the West Bank were not the main obstacle to peace. The government had approved no new settlements on the West Bank for the last four months, he claimed. "I believe that we should have settlements for defence purposes, mainly in the Jordan Valley," he said. "I do not personally really believe they are an obstacle to peace." There was no question of Israel returning to its 1967 borders and allowing the establishment of a Palestinian state, he said. "This would affect our very existence," the deputy prime minister said.

Riots kill 2 in Malagasy Republic

ANTANANARIVO, May 29 (R). — Student riots flared in this Malagasy capital today and at least two people were killed, informed sources said. Many more were injured and police headquarters were set on fire, the sources said. The government imposed a curfew from 7:00 p.m. to 6:00 a.m. to help deal with what appeared to be the gravest student agitation since President Didier Ratsiraka took office in June 1975. Malagasy Radio described the incidents as "trouble stirred by enemies of the socialist revolution and the Malagasy people and aimed at destabilising the ruling regime."

Top German guerrillas are arrested

BONN, May 29 (R). — Yugoslav police have arrested four suspected leading West German guerrillas, the Bonn Justice Ministry said today. The arrests, among the biggest such round-ups for several years, apparently took place more than a week ago. A Justice Ministry spokesman said West Germany had asked for the extradition of the two men and two women. He named those arrested as Sieghard Hoffmann, 33, Brigitte Mohaupt, 28, Rolf Clemens Wagner, 33, and Peter Boock, 27.

Halabi presents his government's policy statement to parliament

DAMASCUS, May 29 (R). — Prime Minister Mohammad Ali Halabi said today his government's aim was to build a modern, powerful Syria capable of confronting "Zionist and imperialist challenges." Mr. Halabi was presenting to the People's Council (parliament) the statement of policy of his government, formed on March 30. "We shall overcome all negative and disruptive factors as well as manifestations of retrogression and intrigue in order to set up our democratic socialist community in which free men will assume the obligations of the new stage," he added. Turning to Syria's Arab policy, he said: "It is based on consolidating the Arab unionist struggle with all energy. It will also promote Arab solidarity effectively to mobilise all Arab energies and economic, military and political resources against the Zionist enemy and his expansionist designs." On the international level, Syria would support national liberation movements, strengthen relations with Non-Aligned Nations and consolidate friendly ties and cooperation with the Soviet Union and Eastern Bloc countries. It would strengthen ties with Islamic and African states and cooperate with friendly European countries.

Crackdown against Egyptian journalists gets underway

CAIRO, May 29 (R). — Egypt today carried on an investigation of 150 left-wing journalists and other critics of President Anwar Sadat's government, official sources said. The investigation by the Socialist Prosecutor, the country's political watchdog, follows sweeping measures overwhelmingly approved in a recent referendum to discipline the press and clamp down on communists and other opponents accused of mounting a smear campaign against the government. The journalists include Mr. Mohammad Heykal, a former editor of the influential Al Ahram newspaper and close confidant of the late President Nasser. The prosecutor, Anwar Habib, said 60 journalists were being investigated — 34 living abroad and 26 living in Egypt. They are suspected of writing articles "defamatory to Egypt and threatening the security of the home front" and could be banned from writing. President Sadat has also rebuked professors at Alexandria University who expressed fears that the crackdown might lead to abuses. Mr. Sadat told them yesterday, "I have no intention to strike at democracy from the back door." Apart from the journalists, 90 politicians of the Nasser era are also being investigated in the purge. The new measures, to be translated into law by the People's Assembly (parliament), stipulate that anybody found guilty of violating national unity, social peace or the country's socialist democratic principles be barred from political life. President Sadat told the Alexandria University professors that Egypt could not afford to be split at home when the country should be alert to developments in the conflict with Israel. "The second Sinai disengagement agreement with Israel expires in four months, in October. Only God knows how Israel will react then. We are in a state of war (with Israel) and our army is prepared to meet any eventuality," the president said. It was assumed Mr. Sadat was in fact referring to the mandate of the United Nations Emergency Force (UNEF) in Sinai coming up for renewal in October. No time limit was ever set on the disengagement agreement itself. President Sadat has coupled his crackdown with two moves certain to win popular approval and seen as concessions to the opposition. Firstly he has refused to ratify a controversial bill on taxation approved by the assembly. In a rebuke to the 360-member house, Mr. Sadat said the bill was not fair to low-income categories, was incompatible with social justice and should be revised by the assembly. In a rebuke to the 360-member house, Mr. Sadat said the bill was not fair to low-income categories, was incompatible with social justice and should be revised by the assembly. Secondly, the president ordered the cancellation of a multi-million dollar joint venture to construct an ultra-modern tourist and residential complex near the Great Pyramids of Giza. Numbers of Egyptians, including archaeologists, writers and members of the parliament, opposed the project on the grounds that it would ruin the country's historic heritage. The opposition had also made veiled hints of corruption in the project.

Sombre tone for NATO parley

WASHINGTON, May 29 (R). — President Carter and 14 other NATO leaders open a two-day summit tomorrow determined to increase the strength of their alliance in the face of growing Soviet military might. But the Western leaders will also pursue their basic political quest of furthering East-West détente and negotiating mutual and balanced arms control measures. The NATO summit is being held on a sombre note. Western leaders are deeply concerned about the growing Soviet and Cuban involvement in Africa and alleged violations of human rights in the Soviet Union and their implications for détente. NATO military chiefs and political experts have warned their leaders of the steady expansion of the Warsaw Pact's nuclear and conventional military capabilities.

Will the talk beget action?

The regional conference on Arab women that opens here this morning will be greeted with the usual combination of yawns and wild cheering that greets any international conference of this sort. We tend towards the cheering side a bit, because we see this conference as yet another needed challenge to the entire Arab World's expressed desire to move ahead on the road of socio-economic development. Are we really serious about that? Have we really thought out the full implications, for example, of moving towards an industrialised economy that will require thousands of new workers who can only be provided in the short run by importing labour or encouraging more Arab women to work? Have we considered the full implications of mobilising Arab women to do their equal share of the work that has to be done to achieve the goals of economic development that we have set for ourselves throughout the Arab World?

If we have not, this conference should give us the opportunity to start doing so. It would be a grand waste of time, for example, if the conference ended up with a lovely list of recommendations that was then ignored by the participating governments because none of those governments had thought to establish the proper institutional structures that are required to translate recommendations into action. In other words, we are faced with the challenge of putting our money where our mouths are. Do we want to mobilise women to play a greater role in the economy? Then we should set up the appropriate structures with the necessary authority and facilities to get that job done. If we do not want to mobilise women in this manner, we should not be holding conferences that give that impression. We suspect that the Arab World tends towards the former position, and that there is a commitment in principle to provide women with the opportunities and training and education that are available to Arab men. But the principle has not been translated into practice, and we see this kind of regional conference as an ideal vehicle by which our commitments can be challenged, strengthened and, one hopes, transformed into action. If this does not happen, the next conference will be greeted with more yawns than cheers, and with good reason.

ARAB PRESS COMMENTARY

AL RA'I thinks that Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin's sudden illness was a pre-determined tactic aimed at delaying a decision on a sensitive and serious issue, namely the future of the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip. Mr. Begin was expected to answer questions put forward by the U.S. administration over this issue. The newspaper says it was hoped during the last three months that efforts for healing inter-Arab differences would bear fruit. But it appears that the Arab countries are not giving enough real attention to the fateful issue of the Middle East.

AL DUSTOUR criticises the U.S. attitude towards the Palestinians' rights. It says the U.S. has exercised pressure publicly against discriminating policies by South Africa and Rhodesia towards the Africans, but its attitude towards the Palestinians rights to self-determination still remains vague. The reason for such conflicting attitudes is that the U.S. doesn't want to anger Israel, thus "sacrificing its moral principles on the altar of political considerations."

New member appointed to national council as Al Khuraisheh resigns

AMMAN, May 29 (JNA). — At the National Consultative Council's regular weekly meeting today a royal decree was read accepting the resignation of Sheikh Nayer Al Khuraisheh and appointing Sheikh Barakat Al Zuhair as a member of the council effective May 28.

Discussion focused on two proposals by Abdullah Al Rimawi and on the standing orders of the council.

Mr. Al Rimawi proposed that the government submit to the council an account of its domestic policy in the wake of the suspension of a local newspaper (Al Dustour) last week. He added that he did not wish to dwell on this particular issue, but wanted to launch a debate on domestic policy.

His second proposal was that the council should debate the government's new draft civil service law, acknowledging that whereas it was not the prerogative of the council to demand that the government submit all its draft laws to the council, yet he thought such important matters should be given a hearing. The members of the council voted that both proposals be put to the government.

This was followed by a discussion of the council's standing orders during which the members agreed that committees formed by the council should at least have five members.

Council member Amin Shuqair objected to an article barring newspaper reports from the list of subjects on which the council could demand an explanation from the government. He argued that there was no justification for barring items published in the press from the list, seeing that if a newspaper report were true there was no reason not to seek an explanation from the government, whereas if the report were false it could easily be denied.

Mr. Shuqair's proposal to delete the exemption of newspaper reports from the list was defeated by a vote on the council floor.

It contains the King's comments on his own travels, on political ideologies, and on Islam. It shows his faith in the ultimate liberation and unity of the Arabs. This edition carries an Introduction by his grandson, King Hussein of Jordan, who succeeded his ailing father after the latter's abdication on 11 August 1952.

The Jordan Islamic Bank, due to open doors early next year hopes to compete with conventional banks on open market

By Ian Kellas
Special to the Jordan Times

AMMAN. — "The Moslem has to pray but also he has to work," explained Dr. Mohammad Saqr, a professor at the University of Jordan and an expert in Islamic economics. The Moslem's religion, he continued, is not just a matter of his personal relationship with God nor is it only concerned with the spiritual aspect of life. "The whole life of the Moslem should be governed by the Islamic Shari'a (religious law)."

There are some people in Jordan who believe that banking should be governed by the Islamic Shari'a and they are setting up a bank which they hope will act as a model in this respect.

"Oh believers fear God and abandon your remaining usury if indeed you are believers" (Surat Al Baqarah). The founders of the Jordan Islamic Bank, which received its official constitution from the government on April 1, take this verse from the Quran literally.

They believe that usury should be taken to mean percentage interest charged on loans. As such it is the basis of much of the Western banking system. The Jordan Islamic Bank will have nothing to do with it. Instead it will base its operations on "commissions for services and on a series of contracts which in effect substitute profit sharing for interest payments."

The Islamic bank will open its doors to the public — Moslem and Christian alike — at the beginning of next year. At the moment it is busy raising its authorized capital of JD 4 million, with a view to

This is the first of a two part series the Jordan Times will be running on Islamic economics. Tomorrow's article will deal with zakat, or the Islamic tax prescribed in the Quran.

held by Dr. Saqr who has taught at Harvard and now runs special courses in Islamic economics at the University of Jordan.

"Though any religion must start from the spirit," Dr. Saqr explained, Islam also "emphasises the importance of the material performance... Work itself is considered to be an

ion. "But the products must be 'halal' — that is, in conformity with the Shari'a — and they must fulfil real needs." He is sharply critical of the Western capitalist principle of maximising production. "Pleasure," he said, "is the end of life in the capitalist society". Listing some of the things which should be prohibited in an Islamic economic system Dr. Saqr mentioned persuasive rather than strictly informative advertising, the excitement to extravagance and waste, and the commercial exploitation of sex, alcohol and drugs. "The consumer in the West is a slave to production," he asserted. By contrast, he went on, "Islamic economics will try to produce the most efficient combination of goods and services. It will not aim at maximising profits."

At the same time, Dr. Saqr does not believe that the state should have total control over the economy. There should be certain restraints imposed. For instance monopolies should, he believes, be prevented and prices should not be pushed religious scruples which prevent people from gaining interest on their investments. Dr. Homoud, who is at present the Assistant General Manager of the Jordan-Gulf Bank will not put his savings in a deposit account — nor will Dr. Saqr.

The Islamic bank looks well on the way to becoming a reality, but what of the other parts of Islamic economics as outlined by Dr. Saqr — are they not unattainable in the twentieth century when the Arab World is so closely involved with alien economies,

...the secular state... within the Islamic economic system, ...should have a wages and prices policy, designed to protect the consumer, and should ensure a more or less equitable distribution of income. "Islam will not allow a few people to be rich and many to be poor."

and when the secular state has become such an important agent of development?

Dr. Saqr feels that the apparent demise of Islamic economic principles is only a temporary affair. "Remember," he says, "that the Islamic way of life was intentionally distorted by the colonialists". Islamic principles, he believes, will enjoy a renaissance when Arab unity is reasserted.

As for the secular state, Dr. Saqr believes that it should continue to play an active part within the Islamic economic system. It should have a wages and prices policy, designed to protect the consumer, and should ensure a more or less equitable distribution of income. "Islam will not allow a few people to be rich and many to be poor," he said. Taxes like the zakat, the Islamic tax prescribed in the Quran, should be levied so that they fall more heavily on the rich than the poor.

When it comes to women, Dr. Saqr adopts a point of view that is out of step with the thinking of most of the people concerned with Jordan's development. He believes that women should be discouraged from entering the labour market. "Women are respected and should be given every opportunity," he said "but with one difference: they should not compete with the man... The basic role of the woman," he continued, is to look after her home and to care for the most important asset of society — that is the children. This is a full time job." So women, he believes, must not be encouraged to leave their homes in search of jobs.

The need for more labour in the economy should be met instead, Dr. Saqr thinks, by the natural population growth. He does not accept Malthusian theories that the earth's resources will be insufficient for a much bigger population.

At the same time, he feels that it is unrealistic to suppose that Jordan's problems could be solved in isolation. The only way ahead is through economic integration with the other Moslem economies — particularly of course the Arab ones. The only way of surmounting what he calls "self-defeating nationalism" is to unite the Arab world around a core of "Islamic thinking and ideology."

The Arab world enjoys great complementarity of resources, he said, but this can only be exploited by unity among the Arab people. This in turn means rejecting the idea that the Western mind is a "superior" and having confidence in the principles of Islam.

Dr. Saqr is basically optimistic about the situation. He points to the great interest there is at the University of Jordan in Islamic economics and culture in general. And he believes that the gap which has opened up between Islamic religious leaders and secular people is now being bridged. Economists and sheikhs are talking to each other. One of the fruits of this new situation, he thinks, is the recent establishment of the Zakat Fund. Another is the setting up of the Jordan Islamic Bank. Tomorrow: Zakat, one of the five pillars of Islam.

OECD gloomily revises its economic forecast

PARIS, May 29 (R). — In a pessimistic revision of its forecasts, the Organisation for Economic Cooperation and Development (OECD) now expects less growth and more unemployment in its 24 member nations this year, informed sources said today.

The OECD is composed of the leading industrial countries of the non-communist world. Its experts have abandoned hopes for a four per cent rate of economic expansion this year, and now predict growth between 3.2 and 3.5 per cent, the sources said.

The earlier hopes were dashed by unexpectedly slow growth in the economies of West Germany and Japan, the sources said.

The new predictions have been prepared for an OECD economic policy committee meeting here today.

OECD experts now predict that the inflation rate for the area will remain stuck at about eight per cent this year.

The world's "motor economies," those of the United States, Japan, West Germany, France, Britain, Canada and Italy, are likely to grow only 3.5 per cent this year, instead of the 3.75 per cent the OECD originally anticipated, the sources said.

Unemployment in the 24-nation area was now expected to reach 17.5 million, half a million more than expected, the sources said.

The United States, which accounts for 40 per cent of OECD output, would show economic growth of between 3.5 and four per cent this year, while Japan's growth would drop from last year's six per cent to about five per cent, the sources said.

MAJOR LEAGUE BASEBALL ROUNDUP

Giants stride ahead at top of League after crowds watch them beat Dodgers

NEW YORK, May 29 (AP). — A combination of free baseball jackets for the kids and Los Angeles for the opposition brought a crowd of 56,103 into Candlestick Park on Sunday -- and the San Francisco Giants sent their fans home happy with a 6-5 victory over the Dodgers.

Terry Whitfield's third double of the game off Don Sutton and Darrell Evans' bloop single to left off reliever La-nice Rautzhan broke the seventh-inning tie in front of the major leagues' biggest crowd of the season and the largest in the Giants' 21-year history in San Francisco. The victory, coupled with Cincinnati's 3-1 loss to San Diego, widened the Giants' National League West lead to 1 1/2 games over the Reds and 3 1/2 over the Dodgers.

In other N.L. action Chicago beat St. Louis 2-0 in a game called by rain after 5 1/3 innings, the New York Mets downed Houston 4-1, Atlanta defeated Philadelphia 5-3 and Pittsburgh beat Montreal 5-2.

In four American League double-headers, Boston swept Detroit by a pair of 4-3 scores; the Chicago White Sox took a pair from Oakland, 3-2 and 4-0; the New York Yankees took two from Toronto, 5-3 and 6-5 in a 13-inning nightcap, and Cleveland split with Baltimore, winning 4-3 in 10 innings, then losing 3-0. In single games, Kansas City outlasted Minnesota 8-7 in 12 innings, Milwaukee beat California 6-3 and rain washed out Seattle's night game at Texas.

Oscar Gamble singled in a first-inning run and doubled to start a two-run burst in the fourth inning of the Padres' victory over the Reds. Dave Kingman singled home two runs in the first inning and Ray Burris made them stand up with his rain-shortened two-hitter.

Nino Espinosa tossed a five-hitter and Doug Flynn drove in two runs with a pair of singles in the Mets' triumph. Jeff Burroughs hit a decisive homer in the fifth inning of the Braves' victory over Philadelphia. The Pirates beat Montreal behind Jim Bibby's four-hitter in his first start this season.

Jim Rice's leadoff homer in the 10th inning of the opener and Dwight Evans' two-run homer in the fourth inning of the nightcap propelled Boston past the Tigers. Jorge Orta's decisive homer in the first game and Francisco Barrios' two-hitter in the second game gave the White Sox their two victories.

Libya fights drop in oil revenues

NICOSIA, Cyprus, May 29 (AP). — Libya's oil minister said his country's oil exports have been reduced by nearly 22 per cent in 1978.

Oil Minister Izzeddin Mabrouk says Libya is currently exporting an average of 1.8 million barrels per day -- nearly 22 per cent less than the target of 2.36 million barrels set for 1978.

It is realized there is not much chance of reaching the 2.3 million barrels per day for the current year, but it is at least hoped exports will reach 2.1 million barrels per day, or roughly the same level as last year, the minister said in an interview with the Middle East Economic Survey, a weekly oil review.

"We need the money, we have financial commitments and very ambitious economic development plans," Mr. Mabrouk said.

The minister said that he hoped the Organisation of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) will decide to increase the dollar price of oil during its next regular meeting in Geneva June 17. "We must tackle this matter in a radical and profound manner," he said.

"The dollar is being used as a means of decreasing the price. Through inflation and dollar depreciation, we have lost 70 per cent of our purchasing power since 1973. By any economic criteria we have the right to adjust prices," the minister added.

Iraq will press OPEC for oil price increase

BAGHDAD, May 29 (AP). — Iraq's oil minister said today his government will press for an increase in the price of oil this year at the regular ministerial meeting of the Organisation of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) in Geneva next month.

"The continuing decline of the value of the (U.S.) dollar compared with other currencies makes the question of an increase in oil prices in 1978 a decisive necessity," the minister, Tayyib Abdul Kerim, said in an interview with the Associated Press.

OPEC states are losing more than $19 billion a year as a result of the decline in the value of the dollar and international inflation, the Iraqi minister noted.

He argued that, since oil is an exhaustible commodity, "its price must at least be equal to its replacement value, and the replacement value at this time would be double the current oil price," Mr. Kerim added.

Deposed Comoro president shot

MORONI, May 29 (R). — Ex-President Ali Soilih of the Comoro Islands, recently deposed in a coup, was shot dead here early today attempting to escape from house arrest, the government announced.

Mr. Ali Soilih was deposed on May 13 after ruling the Indian Ocean republic since shortly after it became independent from France in 1975.

GOVERNOR BRIDGE

BY CHARLES H. GOREN AND OMAR SHARIF

ASK OMAR

Q.—As a relative novice at bridge, one question in particular puzzles me greatly. No one ever bids five no trump except in Blackwood sequences. Why? — Mildred Willig, Salisbury, Md.

(This question has been awarded the weekly prize.)

A.—A good question. The answer is simply that a great majority of players do not realize the usefulness of a bid of five no trump.

Certainly, the Blackwood inquiry is the most common application of the bid. However, listed below are some additional uses for the bid.

a) The grand slam force.

North South
1 NT 3 NT
5 NT

North is interested in a grand slam, and it depends only on South's holding in the trump suit. If South has two of the three top honors in hearts, North wants him to bid a grand slam; if not, North wants to play only six hearts. A typical hand for this bid:

♠ Q10xxx ♠ AKQxx ♠ AKQ
♥ Q10xxx ♠ AKQxx ♠ AKQ

b) As a strength inquiry.

South North
1 NT 5 NT

If South has a maximum no trump, North wants to play a grand slam. If South is minimum, North will be satisfied to play in a small slam. North might hold:

♠ KQx ♠ AJx ♠ AQxx ♠ KJx.

c) As a general inquiry.

North South
1 NT 3 NT
4 NT 4 NT
5 NT 5 NT

features. North might hold:
♠ AKxxxx ♠ Qx ♠ A ♠ AQxx.
North is interested in finding out whether South has second-round club control. If, over five no trump, South can cue-bid six clubs, showing that control, North intends leaping to a grand slam.

d) As an inquiry for specific cards.

North South
5 NT 4 NT

This is an old Culbertson opening bid that asks specifically that South raise one level for each ace, king or queen that he holds. North might have:

♠ KQJ ♠ AKx ♠ AK10 ♠ AKQ.

e) To tell partner you have a key card.

South West North East
1 NT 3 NT 4 NT 4 NT

South's bid of five spades asks North to bid a slam if he can hold his club losers to one. North's five no trump bid says that he has second-round control of the suit, but that it is specifically the king. To prevent a lead through, North is suggesting that the hand be played in no trump rather than in the suit, but leaves the decision to South to place the final contract.

These are some of the non-Blackwood uses for five no trump. There are others, some of them rather esoteric. However, the above should suggest to you that five no trump can be a very valuable bid if properly employed by players who understand the meaning and implications of the bid.

Q.—Would you open this hand?

♠ QJ8 ♠ KQ3 ♠ KJ2 ♠ Q985

—Tom Simpson, Stamford, Conn.

A.—No. True, you have 14 HCP, and all books state that you must open with 14 points. But you should deduct 2 points because the hand is aceless and perfectly balanced, and now the hand is reduced to 12 points consisting mostly of queens and jacks, which are overinflated in the point scale.

NATO's flanks are in danger in Africa and M.E. warns Gen. Haig

WASHINGTON, May 29 (R). — Gen. Alexander Haig, commander of NATO forces in Europe, today urged the Western alliance to look beyond its traditional frontiers and take up "the immediate danger" of challenges stemming from the Middle East and Africa.

In a copyright interview with U.S. News and World Report magazine, he said the likelihood of conflict in Central Europe was not high for the time being.

"The immediate danger stems from the ambivalent, ambiguous situations which occur on the flanks of NATO and peripheral areas — such as the Middle East and Africa," Gen. Haig declared in the interview published in advance of a two-day NATO summit conference opening in Washington on Tuesday.

He did not specifically refer to Soviet and Cuban military penetration in Africa but said the NATO powers must act more effectively to meet such challenges.

The 29-year-old North Atlantic Treaty is confined to the defence of its 13 European member states, including Greece and Turkey, plus Canada and the United States.

Its area of operations does not extend to the Middle East, Africa, or the Indian Ocean.

Gen. Haig's main thesis was that the alliance could deter a surprise attack by the Soviet Union and other Warsaw Pact partners but not without more troops, more money and a new generation of U.S. nuclear weapons.

"They (the Soviets) have overcome a 10-to-1 inferiority in the central strategic balance," Gen. Haig said, "to the point that today they are at parity or essential equivalence with us."

"The momentum in their strategic-force-building programme is such that if it is not capped by acceptable (strategic arms) limitations, it will face the West with the burden of additional spending in the immediate future," Gen. Haig said.

West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt meanwhile said yesterday a U.S. embargo on arms shipments has impaired Turkey's ability to defend NATO's south-eastern flank.

Interviewed on television, the West German leader said a resolution of Greek-Turkish differences over Cyprus and the restoration of American military aid to Turkey was essential to maintain NATO's strength in the eastern Mediterranean.

In response to questions about the high-radiation neutron bomb, he said President Carter made the right decision in deferring deployment of the bomb.

He added that NATO might need it in the future if arms limitation talks with the Soviet Union did not bring results.

Nixon steps back into the limelight again

SAN CLEMENTE, California, May 29 (R). — Former President Richard Nixon stepped back into the limelight here today, telling cheering and applauding former prisoners-of-war in Vietnam that they would never become "tomorrow's forgotten men."

In the biggest party he has given during his secluded retreat here since he was forced to resign the presidency in August 1974, Mr. Nixon addressed an assembly of 300 former POWs who gathered in Los Angeles to celebrate the fifth anniversary of their release. They came to San Clemente with their wives and girlfriends in a fleet of buses at the invitation of Mr. Nixon, breaking the calm and solitude of his strongly guarded home here.

Swiss vote for Sunday motoring

GENEVA, May 29 (R). — Swiss voters today overwhelmingly rejected a proposal to ban Sunday motoring once a month for the sake of the environment. The idea was first proposed by a group of students who gained the backing of more than 115,000 voters and thus forced a plebiscite under the law.

The government had strongly opposed the plan saying it would cause inconvenience to foreign visitors, damage the economy and save less than one per cent of Switzerland's annual energy consumption.

San Marino elections do not end deadlock

SAN MARINO, May 29 (R). — Christian Democrats and Communists both gained votes in yesterday's general elections in this tiny mountain state but final results announced today showed the previous deadlock unresolved.

The ruling Christian Democrats gained one seat, giving them 26 out of the 60 in the Grand and General Council (parliament) but the Communists kept their 16 seats, which with the 15 held by the two socialist parties gave the left an overall majority.

As a result both sides claimed victory but both were cautious in predicting what might happen now in the complicated politics of the world's oldest and smallest republic.

Cuba falling out with Ethiopia?

NAIROBI, Kenya, May 29 (AP). — Western diplomatic sources say serious cracks have developed in the alliance between Cuba and Ethiopia over Cuban support of an outlawed Ethiopian party and Cuban reluctance to get involved in the war against the Eritrean rebels.

The sources said the most serious disagreement apparently developed when the Cubans smuggled a man known as Dr. Negede, a leading figure in a banned Marxist party back into country from exile.

Dr. Negede had to take refuge in the Cuban embassy, the sources said.

He eventually was allowed to leave the country, but Cuban Ambassador Jose Noveda and his second-in-command went with him, at the request of the Ethiopian government, the sources said.

The banned all-Ethiopia socialist movement advocates an end to the Dergue, the ruling military council headed by Lt. Col. Mengistu Haile Mariam, and a return to civilian rule. Since February, it has been a target of Col. Mengistu's "red terror" campaign in which opponents are rounded up and killed the sources said. Another opposition group, the Ethiopian People's Revolutionary Party, apparently was crushed between December and February when an estimated 2,500 persons were executed without trial, the sources said.

The Ethiopians also are upset that Cuba is reluctant to commit some of its 17,000 troops in Ethiopia to an all-out offensive against the rebels in Eritrea the sources continued. The Cuban troops helped Col. Mengistu's forces defeat Somali rebels in the Ogaden desert in southeastern Ethiopia, and they were expected to do the same thing in Eritrea.

But one source said the Cubans are "under intense pressure from non-aligned nations not to become involved" in Eritrea.

"They must also fear that they could become involved in a Vietnam-type situation," he added.

Western intelligence sources say Cuban troops are at Makalle, just south of Eritrea and within easy striking distance of the provincial capital of Asmara, which has been under rebel siege for more than six months.

Vietnam hits back against accusations

BANGKOK, Thailand, May 29 (AP). — Vietnam, warning that "dark clouds are troubling the skies" in its relations with China, today called on the Chinese government to settle growing differences through negotiations.

China contends 80,700 Chinese already have fled Vietnam after a recent crackdown on capitalism and accused Vietnamese of robbing and beating the refugees on their trek to China.

Vietnam denies the allegations, saying that China has planted rumours among overseas Chinese in Vietnam that war with China is imminent.

A Vietnam News Agency dispatch said "all sober-minded people know that the Vietnamese people are not so stupid as to seek trouble with China."

Earlier, the Voice of Vietnam radio said people including National Assembly deputies, members of the Saigon People's Council, intellectuals, religious groups, ethnic Chinese and businessmen held a rally in Saigon yesterday to "reiterate" China's charge that Vietnam is mistreating Chinese residents.
